

[MWS (2006 Bhft I) 141]
ISSN 1470-8078

Notes for Contributors

Max Weber Studies is an international journal which is published twice a year. It concerns itself with the interpretation, reception and application of Max Weber's writings and ideas and celebrates his polysemic legacy. The journal publishes new academic work on Max Weber and includes among its aims:

- The domains of comparative sociology, economic sociology and sociology of technology, organizational sociology and institutional design, political sociology, nation, state and power, the sociology of law and justice, the sociologies of culture, art, music, sexuality, family and religion, and the methodology of the social sciences. It also invites contributions that assess, or utilize, Weber's key ideas in the analysis of historical societies and processes of change with particular reference to the periods of ancient, medieval and modern.
- The continuing place of Weber in the conversation of social theory.
- The interpretation, translation and reception of Weber's texts.
- Milieu analysis of Weber's life, family and society, in particular Marianne Weber.
- Work that extends our understanding of the Weberian antinomies of freedom and ethics, fundamentalism and reason, happiness and vocation, and ethical pacifism and the violence of modernity.

Submitted papers should conform to the Max Weber Studies house style (full details obtainable via <http://www.maxweberstudies.org>). Articles of the following types are welcome:

Full-length articles (average length 6000 words).

Shorter articles for the Notes and Queries section. These can be notes on Weber texts, observations and comments on previous articles, suggestions for new areas of debate, information on new sources, etc.

Book reviews. If you are interested in reviewing, please write to Dr Duncan Kelly, Department of Politics, University of Sheffield, Northumberland Road, Sheffield S10 2TU, UK. Email: d.j.kelly@sheffield.ac.uk; tel: +44 (0)114 222 1692.

Enquiries and articles should be addressed to:

Dr Sam Whimster, Editorial Office, Department of Applied Social Sciences, London Metropolitan University, Old Castle Street, London E1 7NT, UK. Email: s.whimster@londonmet.ac.uk; tel: +44 (0)20 7320 1044.

or to

Dr Austin Harrington, Department of Sociology and Social Policy, University of Leeds, Leeds, LS2 9JT, UK. Email: a.harrington@leeds.ac.uk; tel: +44 (0)113 233 4418.

Publisher's web site

<http://www.maxweberstudies.org/>