

MAX WEBER STUDIES

Max Weber Studies is the premier forum for international debate in Weber studies. The journal seeks to develop, apply and disseminate Max Weber's ideas and is committed to the values and standards of scholarship. The journal promotes fundamental issues: the dilemmas of leading a life and pursuing a vocation in a rationalizing world, the violence of modernity, the universal validity claims of modern science, the multiple paths of modernity, the sociology of the world religions, secularism and ethics, disenchantment and re-enchantment, the dialectic of community and association, stratification and power, and the development of social and historical sciences.

Volume 4, issue 1 includes:

Mina Tobler and Max Weber: Passion Confined

M. Rainer Lepsius

Max Weber and the Rights of Citizens

Duncan Kelly

Max Weber on Usury and Medieval Capitalism: From The History of Commercial Partnerships to The Protestant Ethic

Lutz Kaelber

Understanding Lived Experience: Max Weber's Intellectual Relationship to Simmel, Husserl, James, Starbuck, and Jaspers

Sandro Segre

Ernst Troeltsch's Evaluation of Max and Alfred Weber: Introduction and Translation of Letter by Ernst Troeltsch to Heinrich Dietzel

Friedrich Wilhelm Graf

Plus book reviews

For more information, or to subscribe, visit our website www.maxweberstudies.org

MAX WEBER STUDIES

Max Weber Studies is the premier forum for international debate in Weber studies. The journal seeks to develop, apply and disseminate Max Weber's ideas and is committed to the values and standards of scholarship. The journal promotes fundamental issues: the dilemmas of leading a life and pursuing a vocation in a rationalizing world, the violence of modernity, the universal validity claims of modern science, the multiple paths of modernity, the sociology of the world religions, secularism and ethics, disenchantment and re-enchantment, the dialectic of community and association, stratification and power, and the development of social and historical sciences.

Volume 4, issue 1 includes:

Mina Tobler and Max Weber: Passion Confined

M. Rainer Lepsius

Max Weber and the Rights of Citizens

Duncan Kelly

Max Weber on Usury and Medieval Capitalism: From The History of Commercial Partnerships to The Protestant Ethic

Lutz Kaelber

Understanding Lived Experience: Max Weber's Intellectual Relationship to Simmel, Husserl, James, Starbuck, and Jaspers

Sandro Segre

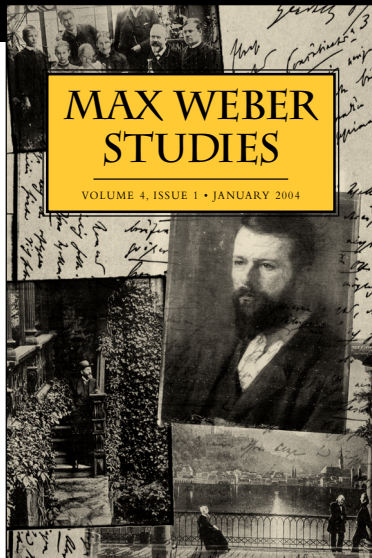

Ernst Troeltsch's Evaluation of Max and Alfred Weber: Introduction and Translation of Letter by Ernst Troeltsch to Heinrich Dietzel

Friedrich Wilhelm Graf

Plus book reviews

For more information, or to subscribe, visit our website www.maxweberstudies.org

MAX WEBER STUDIES

MAX WEBER STUDIES

VOLUME 4, ISSUE 1 • JANUARY 2004

For more information, or to subscribe, please visit our website

www.maxweberstudies.org

Max Weber Studies is the premier forum for international debate in Weber studies. The journal seeks to develop, apply and disseminate Max Weber's ideas and is committed to the values and standards of scholarship. The journal promotes fundamental issues: the dilemmas of leading a life and pursuing a vocation in a rationalizing world, the violence of modernity, the universal validity claims of modern science, the multiple paths of modernity, the sociology of the world religions, secularism and ethics, disenchantment and re-enchantment, the dialectic of community and association, stratification and power, and the development of social and historical sciences.

Volume 4, issue 1 includes:

Mina Tobler and Max Weber: Passion Confined

M. Rainer Lepsius

Max Weber and the Rights of Citizens

Duncan Kelly

Max Weber on Usury and Medieval Capitalism: From The History of Commercial Partnerships to The Protestant Ethic

Lutz Kaelber

Understanding Lived Experience: Max Weber's Intellectual Relationship to Simmel, Husserl, James, Starbuck, and Jaspers

Sandro Segre

Ernst Troeltsch's Evaluation of Max and Alfred Weber:

Introduction and Translation of Letter by Ernst Troeltsch to Heinrich Dietzel

Friedrich Wilhelm Graf

Plus book reviews

MAX WEBER STUDIES

Max Weber Studies is the premier forum for international debate in Weber studies, and seeks to develop, apply and disseminate Max Weber's ideas. Established in 2000, the journal is an independent publication promoting and supporting scholarly work in social and historical sciences.

Volume 4, issue 1 includes:

Mina Tobler and Max Weber: Passion Confined

M. Rainer Lepsius

Max Weber and the Rights of Citizens

Duncan Kelly

Max Weber on Usury and Medieval Capitalism: From The History of Commercial Partnerships to The Protestant Ethic

Lutz Kaelber

Understanding Lived Experience: Max Weber's Intellectual Relationship to Simmel, Husserl, James, Starbuck, and Jaspers

Sandro Segre

Ernst Troeltsch's Evaluation of Max and Alfred Weber: Introduction and Translation of Letter by Ernst Troeltsch to Heinrich Dietzel

Friedrich Wilhelm Graf

Plus book reviews

For more information, or to subscribe, visit our website www.maxweberstudies.org